

I feel the CMRS should be required to grant LNP. It really seems a shame that they would have to be forced into something like this when you purchase your own phone anyway. The number should belong to you as well or at least, the right to maintain it if you desire.

The technology is already in place, just needs to be implemented.

They've had time to set a reputation for themselves. Has it been so poor a reputation that they must stoop to crookery to keep customers?

I should not have to be inconvenienced for moving my business because the company I'm currently with doesn't give me the service I want or require.

Companies have exercised these tactics far to long in our society.
